RMJM Achieves Great Place to Work® Certification.

RMJM is proud to announce that it has officially achieved Great Place to Work® certification, recognising the firm's positive workplace culture and the experience of its employees.

The certification is based on direct and confidential feedback from RMJM employees and reflects the trust, respect, collaboration and sense of belonging experienced across the organisation.

With a global network of architecture and design studios, RMJM brings together professionals from diverse backgrounds, disciplines and markets. The certification recognises the firm's continued commitment to creating a supportive and inclusive working environment where employees are encouraged to share ideas, develop professionally and contribute meaningfully to the organisation's success.

"Achieving Great Place to Work® certification is an important milestone for RMJM and, above all, recognises the voices, perspectives and feedback of our people," said Joanna Kelly, Administrative Director, RMJM. "We are proud of this achievement and grateful to everyone who contributed to it. While we celebrate this recognition, we also see it as an opportunity to continue listening, learning and strengthening the experience of our people, because building a great workplace is an ongoing journey."

RMJM's workplace culture is built around collaboration, creativity and professional growth. The firm continues to invest in employee development, knowledge sharing and opportunities for its teams to work across disciplines, studios and regions.

The certification also reinforces RMJM's belief that outstanding architecture begins with strong, motivated and engaged teams.

RMJM will continue to develop initiatives that support employee wellbeing, career progression, inclusion and collaboration, ensuring that its workplace culture evolves alongside the organisation.

About RMJM
